PUBLIC INFORMATION MEETING ON UPCOMING ENVIRONMENTAL IMPACT STATEMENTS

The National Environmental Protection Act requires federal agencies to evaluate, through an Environmental Impact Statement (EIS), the potential impacts of a proposed federal action that might significantly affect the quality of the environment. The U.S. Department of Energy (DOE) is currently planning the development of three Environmental Impact Statements:

- A programmatic EIS for DOE's environmental restoration and waste management programs nationwide
- A programmatic EIS for reconfiguration of the nation's nuclear weapons complex
- A site-wide EIS for the Rocky Flats Plant

The EIS process includes opportunities for extensive public involvement, including participation in determining the focus, design, content and scope of the evaluation. The U.S. Department of Energy invites interested members of the public to attend an information meeting on the EIS process, the relationship between the currently planned EISs, avenues for public participation and the planned schedule of activity. The public meeting will be held
